Volunteers with our Archivist Team get hands-on experience researching, interpreting, and organizing Kingston area history, and sharing it with the community

Members of the Kingston Historical Society provide financial support, elect trustees to manage the organization, and receive the KINGSTON HISTORIAN newsletter.

Our publication includes announcements of lectures, walks and other community information. It is also free to download.

SEND the Membership form on the other side of this sheet (or copy) with your check.

The Kingston Historical Society (KHS) was formed in 1997 as a community-based, non-partisan, non-profit organization to preserve, enhance and promote the history of the village of Kingston, New Jersey.

The KHS has its headquarters in the Kingston Locktender's House in the Delaware and Raritan Canal State Park. Built in 1834, it was home for the families who operated the canal lock and bridge at Kingston.

The Society works to further research, preserve, and interpret village history and advocates for preserving the historic character of the greater Kingston area.
